Summary

The book of Ephesians describes God’s cosmic purposes and the place of the church in his eternal plans. Written from prison to ordinary people who are a small religious minority in the midst of a colossal economic, military, and cultural empire, Paul masterfully addresses the tension between the victory of Jesus over all things in heaven and earth (which has been accomplished) and our lived experience of waiting for the consummation of his reign over all things. Christians must live worthy of this calling in the midst of a fallen and spiritually embattled world.

In light of this awesome truth about the role of the church in God’s cosmic plans, Paul commands Jesus’ people to line up their personal and communal lives with this already established spiritual reality and grand calling. We are to make every effort to preserve oneness in the church (i.e., stay in the “marriage”). Christ has given leaders to the body as the fruit of his victory over his enemies. Using these leadership gifts rightly is key to the body growing into maturity and unity. Speaking the truth in love and every individual participating in the work are the means by which the church “grows up” into the full stature Christ intends.
